plan of campaign in Kentucky and Tennessee, in the spring of 1862. Mr. Lincoln and General McOlellan were, from, first to last, in favor of a movement on East Tennessee, and of that only. General Halleek, up to the time when the President and General Bnell communicated with him, in the first week in January, had given no thought to any possible military operations in Kentucky and Tennessee; he contributed no suggestions of value to the plans which were then brought to his attention, and, in fact, as late as the 20th of January, his opinion was adverse to the scheme proposed. General Buell alone, and from the very first, too, saw the importance of framing a comprehensive scheme; he, and lie only, thought it out; he urged it again and again on the unwilling attention of McClellan and Ilalleck; and it is to him, and to him only, that the credit of the conception of this plan. belongR. It WEB a great pity that he was not entrusted with the task of carrying it into execution.
